Every year, to celebrate Earth Hour, people throughout the world do one iconic action: turn off the lights. It represents a shared goal, mutual hope and collective strength of people in different countries who would like to support nature.

Started in Sydney in 2007, Earth Hour has been considered as one of the most significant environment movements in the world where anyone can be invited to participate to work for the same goal of protecting the Earth. On the last Saturday of March every year, millions of people take part in the event by turning off their lights.

In the first year of Earth Hour event, people were urged to turn off their lights to raise awareness of climate change. Ten years later, the situation became worse because the threat of biodiversity and nature loss increased. The natural world, which is essential for human existence, has disappeared extremely fast over the past 50 years, and we are losing one of the most effective and economical ways to deal with environmental problems.

Earth Hour has made us use of group power to cause important changes in policies and laws. In addition to fighting climatic problems, it has also helped start worldwide discussions about conserving nature for our own health, happiness, wealth and even survival. Therefore, anyone can make contributions by spreading the word about the significance of protecting our Earth.

Question 24: Which is NOT a meaning of Earth Hour?

- A. Personal achievement
- B. International support

- D. Group power

Question 25: Who can take part in Earth Hour?

- A. People who live in Sydney
- B. Any environmentalists
- C. People who have got invitations
- D. Anyone concerned about environment

Question 26: When is Earth Hour held?

- A. On the final Saturday of March
- B. Every Saturday of March
- C. On the third Saturday every year
- D. On the seventh of March

Question 27: Why has the climate change become more serious for a decade?

- A. People took part in the Earth Hour.
- B. The natural world has been in more danger.
- C. Earth Hour was less influential.
- D. Biodiversity did not exist.

Question 28: What can an individual do to help the Earth?

Every year, to celebrate Earth Hour, people throughout the world do one iconic action: turn off the lights. It represents a shared goal, mutual hope and collective strength of people in different countries who would like to support nature.

Started in Sydney in 2007, Earth Hour has been considered as one of the most significant environment movements in the world where anyone can be invited to participate to work for the same goal of protecting the Earth. On the last Saturday of March every year, millions of people take part in the event by turning off their lights.

In the first year of Earth Hour event, people were urged to turn off their lights to raise awareness of climate change. Ten years later, the situation became worse because the threat of biodiversity and nature loss increased. The natural world, which is essential for human existence, has disappeared extremely fast over the past 50 years, and we are losing one of the most effective and economical ways to deal with environmental problems.

Earth Hour has made us use of group power to cause important changes in policies and laws.
